

Climate and Nature Summit 2021

Report by Hannah M Kehoe.

The Climate and Nature Summit took place from the 1st - 5th of November 2021. Every day four members of the TY Green Team tuned into morning and afternoon sessions where we were informed all about the problems facing us with respect to Climate Change and Nature preservation.

There is an urgency for the climate crisis to be resolved and through attending this virtual summit we now understand that it is us who have the power to make change for the better. If Covid-19 has taught us anything it is that when ingrained normalities are challenged, the power of collective action is the solution to our greatest problems. We also know that sooner intervention often results in a better outcome.

We now realize that our generation is the first to know we're destroying the world and may very well be the last generation able to do anything about it. Therefore, we must work together for a future where people and nature can strive together. We must work to establish 'Green Corridors' for wildlife while also aiming to protect endangered species and habitats.

By listening to representatives from climate and nature organisations, such as Cristian Taylor from WWF (World Wide Fund for Nature), we have learned that we must also inspire others to play their part in implementing climate solutions in parts of our everyday lives, for example, with regards to food, electricity, transport, education, and land use.

We must start making changes NOW, not; tomorrow, next week or next month! If there's one thing that I took from the Nature and Climate Summit, it is how there's strength in unity which means that we must all work together to change how we live as the future is literally ours to shape. Change is coming whether you like it or not!
